

News

Oxy Subsidiary Pays EPA Fine of $153,000

01.10.2015 -

Indspec Chemical Company, a subsidiary of Houston-based Occidental Petroleum, has agreed to pay $153,100 in fines to settle accounts with the US Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) over emissions from the company's Petrolia facility in western Pennsylvania.

The EPA and the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection alleged that Indspec failed to monitor unspecified hazardous air pollutants. The company denied liability, but agreed to pay the penalties under a consent decree.

A final agreement must go through a 30-day public review process and be approved by a US district court judge.

Dede Willams

Indspec Chemical Company

Occ

Subscribe to our Newsletter!

US Environmental Protection Agency (EPA)

Hazardous Substances & Dangerous Goods

WILEY

Plan your 2023 strategy with increased audience reach

Compelling solutions through strategic partnership

View media guides

The advertisement features a woman with curly hair sitting at a desk with a laptop, looking thoughtful. The background is a light blue and white gradient.

Related Articles

Greenpeace Slams Revised US Chemicals Act

Valent BioSciences, Lidochem in Technology Pact

EU Commission Postpones Glyphosate Vote

EPA Cancels Flubendiamide Registration

DuPont Facing 40 PFOA Lawsuits a Year

Subscribe to our Newsletter!

Top Feature

Whitepaper: Enzymatic Degradation of Plastic

Sartorius AG

Media Kit

Subscribe to our Newsletter!

Advertising Opportunities Print, Digital & Content Solutions

Social Media

LinkedIn | Twitter

Subscribe to our Newsletter!

increased audience reach

Compelling solutions through strategic partnership

View media guides

Copyright 2001-2023

- Imprint
- Data Protection
- Terms and Conditions
- About us
- Home

Subscribe to our Newsletter!

Subscribe to our Newsletter!